

Find an Attorney or Other Legal Representation

You should consider hiring an attorney to represent you during the arbitration or mediation process to provide direction and advice. If you cannot afford an attorney, there are many legal aid and pro bono programs in communities that provide legal help for the poor. People with income below the federal poverty guidelines may be eligible for free legal help through these programs. People who are elderly, disabled, enlisted in the military, or in other special circumstances also may be eligible for help even if their income is a little higher.

The AAA® is a neutral administrative organization, and therefore the AAA staff cannot provide specific recommendations for legal representation or referrals. However, we can offer the following general guidance.

If you need help to find a lawyer, you may want to try the following:

- Check the American Bar Association's website https://www.americanbar.org/groups/legal_services/flh-home. The American Bar Association is a national bar association that may provide you with referrals in your area.
- Broaden your list of potential lawyers by consulting directories of attorneys. The Martindale-Hubbell® Law Directory can be found at many libraries or at its website <https://www.martindale.com>. It lists lawyers by state and jurisdictions.

This is not a complete list and we cannot endorse or recommend a specific lawyer to you, vouch for the competence of any lawyer recommended to you by a bar association or referral service, nor recommend the services of one bar association over another.

Law School Clinics

The law schools listed below provide legal representation through clinics. Under the supervision of attorneys, law students will represent qualified parties in AAA administered arbitrations and/or mediations. Parties need to determine if they qualify for help from a clinic; some clinics will not handle claims above a set amount, will only handle certain types of claims, or may require that your income not exceed a certain amount. Please check directly with each clinic for information.

Will provide legal services to self-represented parties in AAA administered arbitrations and/or mediations. Clinic does not have strict eligibility requirements such as income limits, but it does try to take cases in which client otherwise could not afford to hire legal counsel, and looks for cases that offer educational opportunities for our students. Clinic students, under close faculty supervision, represent clients in a wide variety of civil matters in state and federal courts across Ohio. Many cases are resolved through mediation or arbitration. Mortiz College of Law has a well-developed Alternative Dispute Resolution program, and many of its students have taken classes specifically in mediation and negotiation before enrolling in the clinic.
